100% ON

The greatest revenue losses during a disaster — tens of thousands of dollars per hour or more — are incurred by back-office functions such as finance and sales and service call centers. Developing a plan to keep these functions operational in a disaster, and testing and updating the plans are key to ensuring a seamless recovery — for your customers, your shareholders, and your employees.

Located minutes from downtown Columbus, Ohio, the RSL disaster recovery complex offers a productive work environment should the unexpected happen. Workstations equipped with computers, telephones, printers, fax machines, conference rooms, break rooms and state of the art data and communications networks enable companies to recreate their “people intensive” critical business functions in the face of a business interruption or disaster.

100% ON means a company can resume business operations immediately at the RSL complex, whether the nature of the crisis is an IT system failure, loss of utilities, threat to a company’s infrastructure, or the need for more work space.

Every minute of downtime means lost revenue, lost credibility, lost customers!
